Annual Report

FOODSHARE

JANUARY 2018 – JUNE 2019
Over the past few years you’ve heard us say that Foodshare is “changing what it means to be a food bank.” We’ve said it in interviews, in newsletters, and we even have it written on our office wall. This statement has been a guiding principal and reflection point for our organization. We have always been a food bank, and we provide food to help the more than 100,000 food insecure individuals in Greater Hartford… so why would we want to change that?

The short answer is: we don’t. We will continue to provide food for those individuals, having distributed more than 11 million meals in 2018 alone. The longer answer, though, is that food insecurity is not going away regardless of how many meals we supply because the reasons people are hungry are complex. So to us, changing what it means to be a food bank means that we need to do more than provide food to our network of nearly 300 partner programs.

We need to think about all of the factors that contribute to food insecurity and decide how we as an organization can best address those issues to continue our mission of leading an informed, coordinated response to hunger in our community. In the last year we coordinated local Hunger Action Teams, helped households apply for SNAP, and we expanded our innovative SWAP and More Than Food programs to additional pantries.

We need to do more than provide food to our network…

Through these new endeavors we believe that we are changing what it means to be a food bank. None of this would be possible without the support of our community. We thank you and hope that you will continue to join us on this new journey.

Jason Jakubowski
As my term as chairman nears its end, I’ve reflected on how my passion for ending hunger has evolved over the past 20 years, not unlike food banking and Foodshare itself. My first clear memory of truly helping others combat hunger is when my wife, Amanda, and I used to buy food in bulk at Sam’s Club to support local food drives. Great intent, but not very efficient! That all changed when I heard a community presentation about Foodshare in 2004.

The takeaway? That for every 15 cents donated, Foodshare could get $1 of food to people in need. Wow! I was hooked immediately. I believe everyone deserves a chance to pursue the American dream. Education and food security are essential in that regard. I know that a young student who faces hunger repeatedly does not have a fair chance to learn and grow. Fortunately, Foodshare and all of its supporters are not standing idly by. For a long time, Foodshare has excelled at the basics of food banking while also seeking new ways to address the root causes of hunger, like these 2019 innovations and expansions:

Rapid Response – established pop-up sites at Bradley International Airport and after-hours at Foodshare to support federal workers during the partial government shutdown.

Reaching More Kids – partnered with summer camps to connect more kids with food for the weekend.

I’m so proud of Foodshare and grateful for its highly involved board, exceptional leadership team, dedicated staff, generous food industry partners, nearly 300 partner programs, 6,100+ selfless volunteers and every single donor. I’m confident we will end hunger if we continue to work together and use resources as wisely as possible.

With deepest gratitude for all Foodshare supporters,

Tom Buckingham
